1. Quiz flow (5 questions)
2. Results page (structure)
3. Sport content — all 14 sports

1. Quiz flow

Five screens, answered in order. Each screen's heading, subtitle, and option text below.

Step 1 — Sport selection

Heading: "What sport did you play?"

Subtitle: "Pick as many as apply."

Options (grid, multi-select) — the 14 sport names:

Football, Swimming, Golf, Tennis, Badminton, Netball, Basketball, Cricket, Rugby Union, Cycling, Running, Triathlon, Skateboarding, BJJ (Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu)

Button: "Continue"

Step 2 — Last played

Heading: "When did you last play?"

Options (single select):

- Less than a year ago
- 1–5 years ago
- 5–10 years ago
- 10+ years ago

Buttons: "Back" / "Continue"

Step 3 — What's holding you back

Heading: "What's holding you back?"

Subtitle: "Pick as many as apply."

Options (multi-select):

- Fitness / worried I can't keep up
- Time
- Don't know where to go
- Need kit
- All of the above

Buttons: "Back" / "Continue"

Step 4 — Location

Heading: "Where are you based?"

Subtitle: "We'll use this later to find clubs near you."

Input: free-text postcode field. Placeholder text: "e.g. SW1A 1AA"

Buttons: "Back" / "Continue"

Step 5 — Goal

Heading: "What's your goal?"

Options (single select):

- Just for fun
- Get fit
- Compete again
- Meet people

Buttons: "Back" / "See my results"

2. Results page

Heading: "Your comeback plan"

Intro line (dynamic): "Last played [answer]. Goal: [answer]."

Then, for each sport the user selected, a block repeats with:

- Sport name (heading)
- Synopsis paragraph
- "Why people loved it" — paragraph
- "Getting back in" — paragraph
- "Kit to consider" — linked list of kit items (affiliate links, currently placeholders)

Fixed sections after the sport block(s):

"Clubs near [postcode]" — "Club finder coming in a later phase."

"Save your personalised plan" — "Email capture coming in a later phase."

Link: "Start over" (returns to quiz)

3. Sport content (all 14 sports)

Exact text as it appears on each sport's results block, in app order.

Football

Five-a-side, Sunday league, or just a kickabout — football is the easiest sport to drop back into because it's played everywhere, at every level.

Why people loved it

The team, the banter, the simplicity of just turning up with boots.

Getting back in

Local five-a-side leagues (Powerleague, Goals) are the fastest route back in — no long-term commitment, mixed abilities welcome.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Football boots (firm ground)
 - Shin pads
 - Training bibs / kit bag

Swimming

Low impact, easy on ageing joints, and every local leisure centre has a pool. One of the simplest sports to pick back up at any fitness level.

Why people loved it

The headspace of lane swimming, the sense of fitness without pounding your joints.

Getting back in

Check adult lane swim times at your local leisure centre — most offer graded lanes (slow/medium/fast) so you can ease back in.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Swimsuit / jammers
 - Goggles
 - Swim cap

Golf

A sport you genuinely play for life. Coming back after a break is mostly about knocking the rust off your swing and finding a club that suits your pace.

Why people loved it

The walk, the competitiveness against yourself, time outdoors with friends.

Getting back in

Driving ranges are the cheapest way back in before committing to a round — most clubs also offer pay-as-you-go visitor rates.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Golf clubs (starter set)
 - Golf shoes
 - Golf balls / gloves

Tennis

Accessible, sociable, and easy to find a game — parks, clubs, and the LTA's venue finder make tennis one of the simpler comebacks.

Why people loved it

The rallying, the social side of club tennis, the quick bursts of intensity.

Getting back in

LTA's ClubSpark venue finder locates courts and beginner/returner sessions near you.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Tennis racket
 - Tennis shoes
 - Balls

Badminton

Fast, cheap, and available at almost every local sports hall — badminton is one of the quickest sports to get back into this week.

Why people loved it

The speed and reflexes, low cost, easy to organise with friends.

Getting back in

Most leisure centres run pay-and-play badminton courts — no membership needed to start.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Badminton racket
 - Indoor court shoes
 - Shuttlecocks

Netball

England Netball's Back to Netball programme was built exactly for this — structured, social sessions for people returning after time away.

Why people loved it

The team dynamic, the fast pace, the friendships built on court.

Getting back in

Search 'Back to Netball' sessions via England Netball — beginner-friendly and specifically aimed at returners.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Netball
 - Netball trainers
 - Bib set

Basketball

Pick-up games and local leagues make basketball easy to rejoin — the challenge is usually cardio fitness more than skill loss.

Why people loved it

The intensity, the team play, the athleticism.

Getting back in

Look for local pick-up sessions or walking basketball (lower-impact) if it's been a long time.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Basketball shoes

- Basketball
 - Compression gear

Cricket

From village greens to indoor nets, cricket has more entry points than people realise — including shorter formats built for casual players.

Why people loved it

The tradition, the long summer days, the team camaraderie.

Getting back in

All Stars/Dynamos aside, look for local club nets sessions over winter — most clubs welcome returning adult players.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Cricket bat
 - Pads and gloves
 - Cricket bag

Rugby Union

Contact sport comebacks need a bit more care — conditioning first, then contact. Many clubs run non-contact touch or golden oldies sessions for returners.

Why people loved it

The physicality, the club culture, the mates made through the sport.

Getting back in

Ask your local club about touch rugby or 'golden oldies' — a lower-contact route back before full-contact training.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Rugby boots
 - Gum shield
 - Training kit

Cycling

Whether it's commuting, road, or off-road, cycling scales to whatever fitness level you're starting from — and the kit lasts for years.

Why people loved it

The freedom of the open road, exploring new routes, the fitness gains.

Getting back in

British Cycling's 'Let's Ride' events are free, sociable, and aimed at all abilities.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Road or hybrid bike
 - Helmet
 - Padded shorts

Running

The lowest barrier to entry of any sport on this list — a pair of shoes and a plan. Couch to 5K remains the standard route back in.

Why people loved it

The simplicity, the mental clarity, the sense of personal progress.

Getting back in

NHS Couch to 5K app is free and specifically designed for people restarting after time off.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Running shoes
 - GPS running watch
 - Moisture-wicking kit

Triathlon

The most gear-intensive comeback on this list — swim, bike, and run each need their own kit, which makes triathlon the highest-value return for retailers too.

Why people loved it

The variety of training, the achievement of finishing, the community of age-group racing.

Getting back in

British Triathlon lists beginner-friendly 'Tri Stars' events — shorter distances built for returners and first-timers.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Wetsuit
 - Road/tri bike
 - Running shoes
 - Tri suit

Skateboarding

Skateparks have never been more common, and the culture is more welcoming to older returners than it used to be. Balance and confidence come back faster than people expect.

Why people loved it

The creativity, the individual progress, the community at the park.

Getting back in

Check local skatepark 'quiet hours' or adult sessions — many parks now run these specifically for returning older skaters.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Skateboard (complete)
 - Helmet and pads
 - Skate shoes

BJJ (Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu)

A steep but rewarding sport to return to — most gyms welcome returning white/blue belts and will happily let you rebuild at your own pace.

Why people loved it

The problem-solving, the discipline, the respect-based gym culture.

Getting back in

Contact local gyms directly about returning-member rates and beginner-friendly class times — most are flexible with returners.

Kit to consider (affiliate links — currently placeholders)

- Gi (kimono)
- Rash guard
- Mouthguard
